THE DOGS BOLLOCKS

WHAT A LOAD OF BOLLOCKS.....well Dog's Bollocks actually.

Where to begin, in fact that's what the 46 punters who braved the searing desert conditions were asking seconds after they had been dispatched by D.B. on his latest endeavour "ou es le papier" was the cry, perhaps this was Hashing "a la mode" but even the Hare couldn't find the shreddies, we blundered around for 5minutes, one suggestion was that he had bought the grade A+ super biodegradable stuff and it had done just that since it was laid the previous day....unlikely.

We were rewarded with a well laid remainder of the trail and a few moments later after a crafty back check it was full steam ahead including scenes from Rawhide with cattle stampedes et all.

A brief sojourn a la plage to get some sand between our toes was followed moments later by a guided tour of the Lake District culminating in a river crossing over a carbon copy of Alec Guinness' bridge over the Kwai which featured the endangered "Swanus Pinkus" and a guard who attempted to extract a toll from contestants, some hope, 2 minutes later ON IN sounded and apart from a bloodied Big Yin everyone made it safely back, all in all not a bad day's work and with a deadline on Piss quaffing imposed by the Thai Gestapo we got stuck into the chilled stuff, Circle was called and once again the Hare had the pleasure of sitting astride the designer iceberg to hear the verdict which with a thumbs up left Crive the proud possessor of the necklace for yet another 7 days.

No visitors so straight onto grassers and Glad I ate her indicted her offenders while Toblerone Man adjudged Tubby TWINKLY to have committed crimes against Hashing. Leavers Trailer Trash and Emu Plucker had left already to attend yet another high society do with E.P. warbling and strumming, so there was a stand in Downie drinker.

The Hash Crash Bunnet went to the aforementioned Grumpy Jock.com and Tangerine/ Toblerone Man fairly relished his new shoes downie especially since it included "Tea Bags" We have a shiny new BBQ so in the next few weeks it should be getting christened that is if Two Stroke can assemble the f#*k^g thing, keep an ear open for details. Nothing else to report so
